

“Learning the EHR system is an important, and sometimes challenging, part of training technicians. But Nextech is a very user-friendly system all around.”

Nextech is similar to paper charting; you work top to bottom.”

Tori Elkins remembers when years ago Huron Ophthalmology was operating on separate EHR and practice management systems. Neither could meet the demands of their busy practice, and they needed to switch to an all-inclusive software. Now, as longtime users of Nextech, Elkins can attest to the integrated software easing her needs as an administrator, scribe, and technician.

*“Three big things I see and appreciate about Nextech’s EHR are how the workflow is much smoother than what the previous system was. I can pull forward information from previous exams, which was not a capability we had before, and faxing is a lot less complicated.”

Reducing paper usage was one of the most valuable benefits of Nextech’s software to Elkins. She and the team were able to save time, work more efficiently because of streamlined processes, and eliminate redundant data entry.

“The previous PM system had much more paper involved. Through Nextech, we were able to get rid of a lot of that, which was a big win. The templates are very easy to use and adjust, and the billing is much better than what we’d been using.”

Huron Ophthalmology’s billing department saw significant improvement using Nextech’s payments system. All their financial operations were much more cohesive and completed easily instead of struggling with disjointed third-party systems.

“Using Nextech Payments makes it more seamless for us as opposed to using a third-party credit card vendor. Our billing department can run the card and have it connected right in the system rather than having to run it manually.”
